1. No funds are provided in the approved 1955 research and development plan of VEB Funkwerk Koepenick for a continuation of the Decca development project. In early November 1954 Department TEE of the enterprise was "provisionally" informed that no funds were available for the continuation of the project.
2. By the end of 1954 when the development was definitely discontinued, the following parts were completed:
 - a. A laboratory model of the Decca receiver. This receiver had been successfully tried with receptions from the Decca chain
 - b. One model of a decometer.
3. "Final" discontinuation of the Decca project does not mean that the project is actually shelved. The same situation arose in early 1954 when the Decca project was also discontinued and no funds were made available for it in 1954². However, in April 1954, the State Planning Commission made new funds available for the project, which was then resumed.³
